The Pluviophiles

[ ploo-vee-uh-fahyl ] noun: a person who enjoys rain and rainy days, and who is fascinated by the sights, sounds, etc., of rain.

I absolutely love the rain – the sounds, the smell, and the overall feeling it brings. What captivates me the most is how it transforms light and changes our perception of everything around us. The way light reflects off wet pavement, how drops of water on glass glisten like stars, and the breathtaking sight of sunlight breaking through clouds during a rain shower can simply blow my mind. And let's not forget the charm of umbrellas...

Boundless

For me, this series is about empowerment, freedom, joy, and strength, a visual anthem to the resilience and spirit of women. This collection is deeply personal, inspired by the amazing women who've shaped my life, including my late mother, whose strength and spirit continue to guide me.

Their resilience and courage are the heartbeat of these paintings. I try and embody that through vibrant color and dynamic brushstrokes.

like a phoenix that no cage
can imprison." — Rumi*

Mythical Phoenix

With these paintings I want the viewer to feel the freedom and strength within us all. They are a testament to the potential of unrestrained happiness and liberation.

This series is more than just a collection of artwork; it is an invitation to embrace our strength, find joy in our freedom, and rise above any limitations. "Boundless" encourages us to live fully, breathe deeply, and unapologetically step into our power.

No Ordinary Moment

The work captures everyday moments and highlights the sublime beauty all around us. Many of the pieces explore the human element within the ever moving and changing cityscape. Each piece explores our modern world and how we interact with it.

The images are a de-focused, high key interpretation of what we see everyday. The blurred motion imparts the energy of the moment from the simplicity being on an escalator, walking through a busy airport

Split Decision

The inspiration for this piece comes from a moment I had standing on a busy street corner. As I glanced across the street I saw someone who looked like me glancing back.

terminal, or getting caught in the rain. If we step out of the frame for a moment all the stress of a commute for example becomes a beautiful ballet.

Each piece begins with a still frame capture from simple videos shot from a cell phone. The artist then paints the impression of these images with a very limited palette.

Split Decision: Alternative Placement

It sparked my imagination about the effect of our choices. How will our lives change by choosing one street over another? How many realities do we create with every decision?

The piece was designed to be hung in one of two ways, either two roads diverging or one road going to a single vanishing point.

Expression of Form

My figure work delves deeply into both the emotional and experiential aspects of my subjects, as well as their physical form. Each piece embarks on a journey, revealing the unique story of the individual posing for me.

ABOUT THE ARTIST

Ran Stewart has been painting since the age of nine, where he took a small paint by numbers set his parents had gotten for him, painted over the design and made his own painting. He's been painting outside the lines ever since.

His current work is a defocused impressionist look at urban life. "I love to capture a moment in time; be it passengers waiting for a train, people on crowded street, or a lone figure on a rainy night," says Stewart. "There is simplicity in the moment, but the complexity of the story it tells is what fascinates me."

He has a Bachelors degree in Communication and Psychology from Utah State University and a Master's in New Media Design from Full Sail University. Stewart currently works from his studio in Salt Lake City, Utah.

His work has been shown throughout the state for many years most notably at the Springville Art Museum, Adobe Utah Artists and most recently several of his pieces have been acquired by the Utah Artist Collection at the University of Utah Ray Olpin Student Center.
